KJ Limousine Services adds wheelchair accessible sedan to fleet, offering door-to-door executive transport without requiring passengers to transfer from their mobility device

More than 2.7 million Canadians of working age reported a mobility-related disability in the most recent national survey, according to Statistics Canada data published in the 2022 Canadian Survey on Disability. For those who rely on wheelchairs for daily mobility, finding ground transportation that accommodates their needs without requiring a transfer from their mobility device remains a practical challenge in many cities across the country. In Metro Vancouver, transportation providers such as KJ Limousine Services Inc., serving the region since 2004, now offer a wheelchair accessible sedan as part of their fleet, providing an executive-level transportation option for passengers with mobility needs that allows them to remain in their wheelchair throughout the journey without needing to disassemble their chair or transfer into a vehicle seat.

The wheelchair accessible sedan differs from standard wheelchair vans in that it accommodates the passenger directly in their wheelchair within a sedan body style instead of requiring a transfer into a passenger seat. The vehicle includes a rear-entry ramp system that allows the wheelchair user to roll directly into the vehicle without leaving their mobility device. This configuration offers a more discreet and compact option compared with full-size accessible vans, which is particularly useful when parking space is limited at hotels, restaurants, and event venues around the city or when a more professional vehicle appearance is desired for executive transportation to business meetings and corporate functions.

For travelers arriving at Vancouver International Airport, cruise passengers disembarking from ships at Canada Place in downtown Vancouver, or local residents needing reliable transportation to medical appointments and social events throughout the city, the sedan adds an accessible option to the existing executive fleet. The vehicle is operated by professional chauffeurs trained in assisting passengers with mobility needs, including secure wheelchair tie-down procedures, careful ramp deployment and retrieval, and thorough loading assistance for both passengers and their luggage at every stop along the route.

The accessible sedan also serves wedding parties and corporate events where guests with mobility requirements need reliable transportation between venues across the city. Having a dedicated accessible vehicle available in the fleet allows event planners to accommodate all attendees regardless of individual mobility needs, ensuring everyone can participate fully in group transportation arrangements and shared travel to reception venues and event locations throughout the city. The sedan body style means the vehicle can more easily navigate downtown streets and parking structures where full-size accessible vans may face challenges during events in compact urban settings.

The company provides online booking through its reservations page for the accessible sedan and other executive ground services throughout Metro Vancouver. Vehicle selection is based on passenger requirements, group size, and luggage needs, with professional chauffeurs assigned to each individual booking who coordinate directly with passengers on pickup timing and specific meeting locations throughout the region. Hourly and flat-rate packages are available for airport transfers, event transportation, and point-to-point trips.

The company has served the Greater Vancouver area continuously since 2004, offering executive transportation services for airport transfers, cruise terminal pickups at Canada Place, corporate and social events, private city tours, and wedding services throughout the region. Its diverse fleet includes luxury sedans and SUVs, stretch limousines, minibuses, and wheelchair accessible vehicles operated by experienced chauffeurs across the Lower Mainland.
