Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC Emphasizes Furnace Repair Services as Quad Cities Residents Prepare for Winter Season

March 05, 2026

DAVENPORT, Iowa - March 05, 2026 -
Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC, a century-old service provider in Davenport, Iowa, has announced an increased focus on furnace repair and installation services as temperatures drop across the Quad Cities region. The company, which has served local residents since 1923, is mobilizing its technical teams to address the seasonal surge in heating system demands while maintaining its comprehensive plumbing services year-round.

The timing of this service emphasis comes as many homeowners discover heating system issues during the first cold snaps of the season. Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC has prepared its technicians to handle the full spectrum of heating challenges, from minor repairs to complete system replacements, ensuring residents maintain comfortable home temperatures throughout the winter months.

"As we enter the colder season, we're seeing the typical increase in service calls for heating systems that haven't been used since last winter," said Bill Durand, service manager at Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC. "Many homeowners are surprised when their furnace doesn't start properly or runs inefficiently after months of inactivity. Our team is ready to respond quickly to these urgent needs while also helping customers plan for long-term heating solutions."

The company offers comprehensive heating services including furnace repair, boiler installation, geothermal systems, and high-efficiency heating solutions. Their technicians have experience with all types of heating systems, from traditional forced-air furnaces to modern mini-split ductless units. Additionally, the company provides preventative maintenance programs designed to identify potential issues before they become emergency situations.

Beyond heating services, Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC continues to provide full-service plumbing solutions, recognizing that pipe freezing and water heater failures often coincide with cold weather. The company's dual expertise in heating and plumbing positions them to address the interconnected challenges that winter weather brings to residential properties.

The service provider has also introduced accessible financing options through their partnership with GreenSky, ensuring that necessary heating repairs and replacements don't create undue financial stress for families. Their Service Partner Agreements, starting at $99 annually, include yearly furnace inspections and eliminate after-hours service charges, providing peace of mind for homeowners concerned about unexpected heating emergencies.

"We understand that a heating system failure isn't just an inconvenience?it's a genuine emergency during Iowa winters," added Durand. "That's why we maintain 24-hour emergency service availability and work to make our services as accessible as possible through financing options and maintenance agreements."

This news article highlights how established service providers adapt to seasonal demands while maintaining comprehensive service offerings. Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC exemplifies this approach by scaling their heating services during peak demand periods without compromising their year-round plumbing capabilities.

Northwest Plumbing Heating & AC has served the Quad Cities area for 100 years, establishing itself as a trusted provider of residential heating, cooling, and plumbing services. The company maintains a team of experienced technicians trained in both traditional and modern HVAC systems, offering everything from emergency repairs to planned system upgrades.
